Few know that a majority of US Troops travel through Ireland on the way to Iraq - in spite of Ireland's constitutionally mandated neutrality and non-alignment.

This Indymedia film documents the emergence of the Irish antiwar movement between 2002 and 2006 and of the broad popular opposition to the US military use of Ireland's civilian Shannon Airport in the buildup to, invasion of, and occupation of Iraq.

The film follows a loose network of activist groups, individuals and politicians through the story of the rise, fracturing, sudden decline and then disappearance of this movement and then retraces the way in which their combined efforts, energies and strategies served to effectively tear away the Rep of Ireland's veneer of neutrality and non-alignment in the post September 11th era of the 'War on Terror'.
